I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change

Joe Dipietro, author and lyricist, and Jummy Roberts, composer

February 10 - 19

Paula Mabry, director

A musical comedy with everything you ever secretly thought but were afraid to admit. The foibles and follies of dating, romance, marriage, lovers, husbands, wives, children, and in-laws all come together as the vocalists dare to ask the questions for us. From first dates to funerals and from diapers to divorce, this charming revue will tickle your funny bone and touch your heart!

Communicating Doors

Alan Ayckbourn

March 31 - April 9

MJ Etua, director

The year is 2014. Poopay is summoned to a sixth-floor room in a five-star London hotel by Reece, an elderly businessman, to witness a document detailing the murder of his two wives. When the murderer enters, Poopay disappears through the nearest door and finds herself in an identical suite in the year 1994. To her surprise, she finds its occupant is Reece's second wife, Ruella. Ruella's bewilderment at Poopay's story only increases when the two women go through the same door and find themselves in the same suite in 1974 with Reece's first wife Jessica. The three women decide to work together to rewrite the future.

Produced by special arrangement with Samuel French, Inc.
